No-Cost Marketing Services for Small Farmers & Food-Based Businesses in Northwest Region

NORTHWEST LOWER, MI – Together in partnership, the teams at the Northwest Michigan Small Business Development Center (MI-SBDC) and Taste the Local Difference (TLD), are working together to offer no-cost marketing services to small farmers and food-based businesses in the Northwest region. A soft launch of this program was rolled out in January and five small businesses are now working with both the SBDC and TLD on a variety of marketing needs from creating online stores, developing social media content, third party media strategy and more. Priority is given to businesses with ten or fewer employees and they must be for-profit entities.

“The Northwest region has been a leader in the state of Michigan’s ‘buy local movement’ for nearly twenty years and we know that it’s important for our small farmers, growers, producers, and other food-based businesses to get some much needed help as well. We’ve chosen to lend priority to those smaller sized operations as they weren’t often eligible for other traditional disaster assistance or grant relief programs,” said Annie Olds, Northwest MI-SBDC Regional Director at Networks Northwest.

Similar to the partnership that was announced last month with NMC’s Extended Educational Services (EES) relaunch of the Business Development Certificate program, this partnership was made possible by way of CARES Act funds that were awarded to the Northwest MI-SBDC as a means of program development for small business owners either in the name of training, hiring contractors to add consulting capacity, or hiring service vendors to support small business owners in this trying year. And Taste the Local Difference was top of mind as an important collaborator and partner.

“TLD’s goal has always been to help local farms and food businesses succeed,” says Tricia Phelps, CEO at Taste the Local Difference. “Partnership with the SBDC and Networks Northwest is a natural fit. Our combined strengths create a critical support team for these entrepreneurs, with an emphasis on building capacity and strategy. We’re thrilled to be developing this important partnership when our local food businesses need it most.”
