ABOUT THIS DOCUMENT

This document is meant to serve as a worksheet that provides guidance on the type of recovery actions each community in Northwest Michigan can take to mitigate the coronavirus-related economic disruptions that have occurred in our region, as well as plan for a strong and resilient future, following an overarching regional framework.

The document is divided into four planning/action phases, each with a general timeframe for implementation. The action recommendations made here are suggestive only; not all will apply equally to each municipality throughout Northwest Michigan, and each may have their own additional goals or areas of focus that should be addressed given the local context.

How to Use the Roadmap

Each phase (Phase 1-4) includes a summary of the timing, overall goal, a list of the types of stakeholders that might be involved, recommended actions, and anticipated outcomes of each respective phase. Together, this serves as the roadmap for recovery planning within the regional framework to spark thought and inspire local action. Following that outline, numbered “Action Steps” detail the activity stakeholders should embark on, and which types of stakeholders might take the lead or support those actions.

Each community should use the space below each action step description to record the specific actions taken that correspond to the action steps in each phase to date, as well as the specific organizations or agencies that have helped lead or support those action items.
