Still Time to Enroll in Tuition-Free Heavy Highway Construction Equipment Training at NMC

TRAVERSE CITY, MI - Anyone interested in learning the skills needed for a career in the in-demand field of highway construction still has time to enroll in a new program at Northwestern Michigan College (NMC) in Traverse City. The Heavy Highway Construction Training Program is being offered by NMC in partnership with Northwest Michigan Works!, Team Elmer's, and Jobs for Michigan's Graduates. The eight-week program starts on January 16, 2023. An information session on December 8 in Traverse City will give people an opportunity to learn about the program.

The information session will provide an overview of the course and the enrollment process and give prospective students the opportunity to talk to an employer and view construction equipment. The December 8 information session will run from 5:30 pm to 6:30 pm at NMC's Aero Park Laboratories building located at 2525 Aero Park Drive.

"We are very excited to offer this accelerated training opportunity to meet the growing demand in highway construction," said Jason Slade, Vice President for Strategic Initiatives at NMC. "This training is the result of listening and collaborating with local employers and Northwest Michigan Works! to develop a fully-funded workforce training program. Upon completion, participants will earn an industry recognized credential which can lead to employment in the highway construction field."

To be eligible for the program students need to be 18 or older, have a high school diploma or GED, and be authorized to work in the United States. Once eligibility has been determined funding will be provided and the course will be offered free of charge. Funding is provided by a Michigan Learning and Education Advancement Program (MiLEAP) grant that Northwest Michigan Works! received from the Michigan Department of Labor and Economic Opportunity (LEO).
